Today (Monday, June 10, 2013) we, as a student and staff community, celebrated the accomplishments of our 2012-2013 school year. In a very simple format, dubbed “Gathering Day” we recognized several individual children who were awarded winning status in a variety of county competitions, in addition to students who went above and beyond to assist peers in the school setting. Then, starting at fifth grade and working to kindergarten, we cited the significant events for each level until, at the end, every student in Radnor Elementary was standing in acknowledgement of their participation in meaningful extra-curricular activities. To name only a few, these included: bus safeties, band/orchestra, Reading Olympics, the adoption of a local pet rescue, Earth Day activities, Science Fair, caring for the bird and butterfly gardens, Read for Ronald and 100 Day projects. This was a nice opportunity as a school community to thank the children for their hard work and to have the students thank the teachers for their nurturing approach to learning. As a finale, we sang a rendition of “If You’re Happy and You Know It” with a few modifications to pat our brain as learners and shout Hooray as respectful friends to each other. It was short and sweet but I hope meaningful to the children to look to the close of this school year with a sense of pride and accomplishment! That would second my emotion with gratitude to all who have made this a wonderful and productive year at Radnor Elementary.

Proudly,

Mrs. Borden

Another colorful year at RES!!!!
